

Selecting your realtor

Even before completing the preparation steps and getting your home into its best physical condition, it's time to select a Realtor to market your home.

Choosing that person or team of people to assist in selling your home should take into account a number of important factors. Your family and friends can recommend someone. Or, if you're new to the area, your current Realtor can recommend a colleague in the city you're moving to. Most top producing agents have a team backing them. Each team member is responsible for a critical function in the sale of your home. From marketing to sales, you'll become acquainted with each member of the team. Teams work well to ensure you can always reach someone who can help answer the myriad of questions and concerns you will have during the entire process. Choose someone you feel comfortable with.
